

CEO Michel Alvarez Invited to Present Healionics at the New York Venture Summit

Redmond, WA, (May 29, 2009)— CEO Michel Alvarez will be presenting Healionics at the New York Venture Summit, which brings together a select group of innovative companies seeking early venture funding. The conference takes place on June 17 in New York City.

Since its launch in 2007, Healionics has signed 20 commercial research agreements to evaluate its breakthrough STAR® (Sphere Templated Angiogenic Regeneration) biomaterial in multiple market applications with companies ranging from large multinationals to well-funded startups. In addition, earlier this year Healionics released its first commercial product, an innovative veterinary glaucoma implant, marketed by TR BioSurgical, LLC.

“With the challenges of securing additional capital in today’s economy, we are reaching out beyond the West Coast where we have successfully raised $4.3M. We are very excited to share the Healionics’ story and traction for the first time in the Big Apple,” says Michel Alvarez, CEO of Healionics Corporation.

Mr. Alvarez is a veteran of the medical device industry overseeing successful product development, manufacturing, commercial launch, and business development activities. He has helped lead Healionics since its inception in 2007.

More information about the New York Venture Summit can be found at <http://www.youngstartup.com/newyork09/present.php>

About Healionics Corporation

Healionics is a privately held biomaterials company whose mission is to be the leading provider of tissue regeneration and device biointegration solutions to healthcare manufacturers. The Company’s flagship STAR - Sphere Templated Angiogenic Regeneration – biomaterial scaffold is a next generation biomaterial scaffold designed to enhance bio-integration and promote healing of implanted medical devices. Healionics Corporation is headquartered in Redmond, Washington. For more information, please visit <http://www.healionics.com>.

###

Contact:
Julie Rathbun
Rathbun Communications, Inc.
(206) 769-9219
Julie@rathbuncomm.com